American Quarter Horse Association's Lynn Palm and Christine Hamilton Win Livestock Publications Council 2007 Award

Ocala, Florida (August 27, 2007) American Quarter Horse Association Professional Horseman, Lynn Palm and Christine Hamilton, field editor for The American Quarter Horse Journal received second place for their Instructional Story Category entry in the Livestock Publications Council 2007 critique contest.

The award winning article by Palm and Hamilton was published in The Quarter Horse Journal's May 2006 issue. The article was part of a "Borrow a Trainer" horse training tips series and titled "You're Never Too Good to Go Back to the Basics - Lesson Four: Reading Your Horse".

The Livestock Publication Council judges' comments included: "The writer's use of words makes it easy to visualize what she is trying to explain. She illustrates points with good comparison. The article is divided into small sections and good examples are given. The pull-out boxes are similarly placed and easy to locate."

"Christine Hamilton is an exceptional writer – dedicated to excellence and a pleasure to work with. I'm honored and grateful the article was chosen for a Livestock Publication Council Award," notes Palm.

Lynn Palm and husband French Riding Master Cyril Pittion-Rossillon, own and operate, Palm Partnership Training, a world class international equestrian education center with equestrian facilities in Florida and Michigan.
